

DAILY EVENING BULLETIN.

THURSDAY EVENING, FEB. 23, 1882.

If any one should come to you,
Your "umberell" to borrow,
And you desire to keep it safe,
For fear it rains to-morrow.
Or, perhaps, to keep it from
The way your other went,
You'll simply say unto your friend,
Dear sir, you know its Lent.

The Mason County Guards are to have new uniforms.

On account of the difficulties of navigation, the Morning Mail missed her trip yesterday but arrived on time to-day.

The river is coming up again to-day and has reached the highest stage this season. Second street, east of Limestone bridge, is under water and pedestrians are obliged to take another route.

A NUMBER of the merchants and business men of Portsmouth, presented an elegant flag and a large bible to Capt. J.C. Agnew, of the steamer Return, as a mark of their appreciation of his enterprise in putting a boat in the Portsmouth and Manchester trade. The presentation took place in the cabin of the boat at Portsmouth last Monday.

Notice.

There will be a meeting of the Mason County Guards at their armory on Tuesday evening February, 28th, 1882 at 7:30 o'clock at which time Col. F. S. Owens, aid-de-camp to the governor will distribute the funds due the company for services at Catlettsburg. All persons having claims against the company will present them on or before that time for payment.

Startling News Concerning the Ashland Tragedy.

Ellis Makes a Second Confession Declaring Craft, Neal and Himself Innocent.

LEXINGTON, KY, February, 23, 1882.—Ellis, the Ashland murderer, has made another statement. He says Powell, who keeps a store at Ashland, asked him if he knew anything about the murder. He answered no but he could give him some points to work on. Powell then took him to see Marshal Heflin, and he told the officer that he had heard Craft and Neal talking about the girls.

After that he said he went to a saloon with a man named Carroll, and was asked by the bar tender about the murder and answered that he knew nothing about it. He was told in the saloon that there was a large reward for the man who committed the crime, and was given several drinks to induce him to talk. That night Mr. Heflin came to see him and asked him to go to town and see the citizens' committee to tell what he had said about Craft and Neal.

Ellis asserts now that he did not know what he said and remembered nothing until the next morning when he awoke in jail. He wanted to deny his confession then, but was told he must adhere to it or all three of them would be hanged. He says he was threatened with violence if he did not stick to his confession, and was told that Neal had made a statement admitting his guilt and that evidence had been obtained that would hang all three.

He declares he knew nothing of the murder or the fire until five o'clock next morning and was at home all that night. He went to the fire and saw one of the children taken out, and went himself into the building and helped to remove the things, remaining about an hour, and leaving because the smell of the burned bodies made him sick. Neal and Craft, he says, had nothing to do with the murder to his knowledge, and that his first confession was false. Ellis' statement was voluntary.

The act allows a subscription not exceeding seventy-five thousand dollars. It was approved by the council and ordered to be sent to Hon. H. C. Bruce and Hon. J. D.
